Abstract

Dispelling some myths: what is Design for All (what is design?)?

Does "All" mean "one size fits all"... or is this more complex? If so, how?

Designing "for" people: how to get it right.

What role can IT and AI play in the design agenda? Or, vice-versa: what role can and should design play in the IT and AI agenda?

Can design guarantee 100% protection for everyone? At what cost (economic, social, political)?

If long-term imposition is unsustainable in a democracy, what alternatives can design offer?
